The Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan builds on the Strategic Framework, Mind and Spirit: Promoting Mental Health and Addictions Recovery in the Northwest Territories, and supports the current Mandate of the Government of the Northwest Territories (GNWT) to focus on mental health and addictions by ensuring that services are delivered locally with culturally-appropriate methods.

This action plan represents a shared vision and partnership between the Departments of Health and Social Services (HSS); Education, Culture and Employment; Justice; and Municipal and Community Affairs. The work was guided by the results of extensive engagement with Northwest Territories’ youth, which was conducted over the past year. Youth know what threatens their mental wellness and they also know what they need to be healthy and well. We will continue to engage youth throughout the life of the plan to ensure that we are getting it right.

This action plan focuses on the strengths that already exist in our system, improving communication and collaboration, increasing access to specialized mental health services, and addressing the social determinants of health. Connection to culture is foundational to lifelong mental wellness, and this action plan supports the need for children and youth to participate in cultural and land based programming. Our goal is to create a truly holistic, integrated approach to caring for the mental wellness of our children and youth from birth through to adulthood to ensure that they thrive and become their best selves.

It is with great optimism for the future that we begin the implementation of this action plan. Success in this will mean greater health and wellness for children, youth and their families, as well as a strong future for the NWT.

Glen Abernethy
Minister of Health and Social Services
In November 2016, the Department of Health and Social Services released Mind and Spirit: Promoting Mental Health and Addictions Recovery in the Northwest Territories (Framework). The Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan is the first of three action plans to be developed under the Framework. Based on the holistic circle of care described in the Framework, the activities set forth in the Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan are guided by four strategic directions:

- A Focus on Prevention and Early Intervention
- A Recovery-Oriented System
- Personal Experience and Outcomes
- A Whole of Government Approach.

The Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan is the product of collaboration among multiple Departments and Authorities within the Government of the Northwest Territories (GNWT) – Health and Social Services system (HSS); Department of Education, Culture and Employment (ECE); Department of Justice (DOJ); and Department of Municipal and Community Affairs (MACA).

This Action Plan reflects what was heard from approximately 130 youth from every region of the Northwest Territories (NWT) about their mental wellness needs, and this insight was supported by leading practices and research in promoting mental wellness in children and youth. Lastly, the development of the Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan was informed by past reviews of Mental Health and Addictions Services in the NWT; recommendations from the 2016 Expert Panel Review; the Quality Mental Health Care Action Plan; and by National Frameworks on mental wellness and life promotion.
Mental wellness promotion and addictions prevention is particularly critical for children and youth, and requires partnerships in the areas of early childhood development; anti-poverty; child protection; language and culture preservation and promotion; and school-based mental health promotion and support. In order to ensure a comprehensive approach, various divisions within the Department of Health and Social Services were involved in the development of this action plan. Areas of the Department responsible for community-based counselling, culturally based programming, child and family supports, and health care all have a role to play in overall contributions to improving the mental wellness of children and youth. The Department works closely with the Health and Social Services Authorities as one system, working toward a common goal, to ensure successful implementation of this action plan and the delivery of programs and services that effectively support children, youth and their families. In addition to this integrated, internal approach to addressing the needs of children and youth, the Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan is aligned with and builds on other GNWT Policy Frameworks and Action Plans, such as:

- Building Stronger Families – An Action Plan to Transform Child and Family Services
- Building a Culturally Respectful Health and Social Services System
- Early Childhood Development Strategic Framework and Action Plans
- Government of the Northwest Territories Anti-Poverty Action Plan
- Northwest Territories Aboriginal Languages Framework: A Shared Responsibility
- NWT Education Renewal Action Plan
- Skills 4 Success 4-Year Action Plan

None of these action plans work in isolation. They are all part of a larger picture, a whole of government approach to successfully supporting the full spectrum of child and youth mental wellness. Taken together, these action plans and the Child and Youth Mental Wellness Action Plan, represent a comprehensive and broad continuum of activities designed to improve and support the mental wellness of children and youth across the NWT.

A Note on Youth Engagement

Taking the time to engage with youth in a meaningful way is critical to achieve success in supporting and promoting youth mental wellness. Listening to youth lets us know what is important to them, what types of services and information they need, and how they want to receive the information and services. This knowledge enables us to better prioritize our work.

As an example, at the Back to the Trail Youth Gathering that took place in May 2017, both youth and adults from across the NWT were asked to identify the top five topics they felt youth wanted to learn more about. The results of this exercise are below:

Youth
- Looking after our land
- Sexual health
- Suicide
- Healthy relationships
- Healthy coping skills

Adults
- Healthy relationships
- Substance use
- Sexual health
- Healthy coping skills
- Suicide

While there are similarities in the topic areas, there are also clear differences in how these topics are weighted. Knowing this helps us to target our efforts and prioritize our activities in a manner that is aligned with the priorities of NWT youth.
Monitoring Progress

We will continue to engage with children, youth and their families to help shape our programs and services to better respond to their needs. We will review existing NWT data related to child and youth mental wellness, on an ongoing basis, to track changes over time. This data and feedback from children, youth and their families will also be used to inform program development and improve programs and services. In addition, we will report progress on specific Action Plan activities through the NWT Health and Social Services System Annual Report. Where identified in the Action Plan, we will be developing individual monitoring and evaluation plans. The focus of these plans will depend on the identified objectives for program monitoring, such as outcome achievement, information for program refinement, and evidence to inform and/or determine the need for program expansion.

Seamless Care Pathway

This Action Plan addresses the full continuum of services that need to be in place to ensure optimal mental wellness for children and youth in the NWT. A full continuum of services consists of prevention, promotion, early identification, treatment and ongoing recovery supports. This represents a broad, holistic approach that involves governments, communities and families working together to promote resilience, increase protective factors, enhance coping skills, reduce stigma and increase cultural connection. It also includes government agencies working in a person and family centred, integrated manner to deliver services specific to the needs of the individual and family and in light of the existing resources in the community. This system needs to be adaptive and flexible because the needs of each child or youth can and will change over time and with age. The Seamless Care Pathway model (Figure 1) recognizes that mental health and wellness services need to be tailored to the needs of the individual. This model offers a variety of services, from least to most intensive, which are then matched to the needs of the individual. Another key feature of this model is there is no wrong door to access services – service providers along the pathway will have the skills and information to work with individuals to determine their individual need and direct them to the appropriate provider(s) and supports. The Seamless Care Pathway model will improve the coordination of services and sharing of information through a team approach that also recognizes the role of family while respecting the rights of youth to privacy and confidentiality.
Our Seamless Care Pathway model recognizes that a person's culture, family values, and spirituality will impact care needs. Our plan commits the health and social services system to ensuring that a continuum of services is available to provide youth and their families with access to the appropriate services. There is also a critical role for communities to play in ensuring that appropriate supports are in place to promote and encourage youth mental wellness. For Indigenous youth, this may mean access to land-based programs, cultural activities and language revitalization. For others, it may mean access to youth-focused recovery and aftercare programs. Some youth will find that engagement in sport and physical activity hastens their path to attaining and maintaining wellness, while for others, art or music may hold the key.
